

The HellermannTyton

Mindbender?

Long distance travel

Harry Hoppit, the famous solo airman, was in his London penthouse suite planning his next flight. "Maybe I'll go over the North Pole", he said out loud, looking out of the window towards the hills of Hampstead.

"On the other hand, I could go via America," he muttered to himself, looking out towards Westminster Abbey and the Thames Valley beyond.

"Why don't you just take the quickest route?" asked his girlfriend, Persephone.

"It makes no difference," he replied. "What's a few miles here or there, when I'm going so far?" and he continued muttering to himself, "Perhaps I should fly over India ..."

What was Hoppit's destination?
