Mindbender?

Past the postmaster

Fred wanted to send a gun by parcel post, but he was disappointed. The postmaster told him that it was a little over a metre in length, and that no parcel over a metre could be accepted.

Fred was not stumped for long. He went away and wrapped it up carefully and brought it back to the postmaster who accepted it for posting. Fred did not take the gun apart in any way. Indeed, the gun was just as long as when it was unwrapped. How did he get it past the postmaster?
